Some person or persons left five wee puppies to freeze to death at the side of the road, 2 miles east of the gas camp last Saturday night. One pup, a little older, was taken care of by some kind hearted folks. We have heard of "man's inhumanity to man" but such treatment of dumb, helpless animals is certainly inhuman.

WITH THE District Agriculturist

By J. S. Duncan

"New" Grain Varieties

There appears to be a few fast talkers selling seed of so called new varieties at fancy prices this year. This is nothing new, but there always seems to be farmers who get taken in. Before buying seed of any new variety, it is a good idea to find out whether it might be suitable, and also what the price should be for it. There are many reputable firms and individuals in the seed business and they are always willing to give references if required, most of the fast talkers won't do this, so ask a few questions before you hand over money for a seedling which may have little or no value.

Farm Safety

Icy conditions and rutted roads can lead to trouble with tractors, as well as with cars. Always be careful when pulling a load behind the tractor, but be extra careful going down hill when roads are slippery. The load can ever run the tractor and jack-knife, causing loss of control or tipping. Taking time to be careful is the best way to avoid accidents.

Hauling Screenings

It is illegal to haul screenings except in bags, covered containers or with the truck box properly covered with a tarpaulin. It is also necessary to have a permit to move screenings. This can be obtained from your weed inspector or Field Supervisor. These regulations are for the purpose of preventing the spread of weeds. Every farmer knows that control of weeds is an essential business. Screenings should be prepared to take a little trouble to prevent any needless spreading of weed seeds along roads and field edges. If you have occasion to transport screenings, make sure that they won't blow around as you go.

Canadian Chamber of Commerce asks federal government to review Customs Tariff Act, Customs Act

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce in a major policy statement on trade asked the federal government to make a complete review of the Customs Tariff Act and the Customs Act "in order to have this legislation meet the demand of Canada's dynamic economy."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker and the Cabinet were told by a Canadian Chamber delegation headed by President Ralph Pybus, Vancouver, that certain segments of the Canadian economy are seriously affected by competition from foreign sources. Some of these problems could be alleviated, it was stated, by exercising control over the tariff classifications of imports, by strengthening the regulations to prevent imports at dump prices, and by investigating promptly imports suspected of evading dumping duty. These steps could be taken without deviating from the principles of GATT or other existing agreements. The Chamber, it was pointed out, continued to subscribe to those principles of conduct expressed in GATT that are requisite to expanding trade on a multi-lateral basis throughout the world.

Other policies stressed by the Chamber delegation had to do with employer-employee relations, taxation and government expenditure. Canada's relations with the United States and the United Kingdom. All told over 40 policy declarations and resolutions were laid before the government by the Canadian Chamber delegation as representing the majority views of over 750 Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce with an underlying membership of some 125,000 businessmen across Canada.

On employer-employee relations the Chamber said in part: "The Chamber supports the principle of collective bargaining between the representatives of employers and employees. Labour unions and other employees' organizations have responsibilities to the public, to its employees and to shareholders. The Chamber believes that both parties should be equally responsible under the law."

New policies on automation and employment of the older worker also were brought to the attention of the government. Failure to harness automation's advantages to improve productivity, the Chamber said, would prove fatal to the competitive position of many Canadian industries, with corresponding damage to "our hopes of an improving standard of living." By introducing automation gradually, there would be opportunities for any required retraining or redeployment of the work force. As for employment of the older worker, the government was told that the Canadian Chamber would urge Canadian employers to recognize the skill and experience of older workers and give consideration to the suitable employment of this group to the fullest extent practicable.

Dealing with taxation and government spending, the Chamber warned that the current level of government expenditures requires both personal and corporate income tax rates that are too high for a developing country. The government also was asked to arrange at the earliest possible moment a conference of federal, provincial and municipal representatives for the purpose of seeking "a more just and practicable distribution of the tax revenue and responsibility among these three levels of government."

On Canada's relations with the United States and the United Kingdom, the Chamber stressed the importance of increasing mutual understanding. Among other things, there was specific reference to the desirability of doing everything possible to attract a larger volume of United Kingdom investment in this country.

The Chamber's submission also asked among other things that the government:

1. Extend the facilities of the Industrial Development Bank to embrace the tourist industry and thus promote "an orderly expansion of the tourist industry throughout Canada";
2. Allow no relaxation in Canada's defence efforts until definite and concrete results have been achieved in easing international tensions;
3. Make an immediate thorough study of air and water pollution and take appropriate action as this question has become a problem of "great concern to many areas";
4. Extend to 8 p.m. the hours of polling in federal elections. Provide for the greatly extended use of advance polls in federal elections.

MAY CONSTRUCT AIR STRIP HERE

At a regular meeting of Watrous Town Council on Monday night, the clerk advised that the Sask. Power Corp. had intimated that they would possibly be constructing an air strip at Watrous and wished to know if the town had any land available for same. The matter was discussed and will be brought up again at an early date.—The Manitou, Watrous, Sask., Nov. 7, 1957.

Mr. Bill Miller, (seated) Chief Highway Traffic Officer, shows Mr. J. A. Christie, chairman of Highway Traffic Board, newly acquired diploma from the Traffic Institute.

Chief Traffic Officer graduates from Traffic Institute

Bill S. Miller, chief traffic officer of the Saskatchewan Highway Traffic Board graduated recently from the Traffic Institute of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., after completing the university's entire four-year program, J. A. Christie, chairman of the Traffic Board, said.

Mr. Miller was one of two traffic officials who completed the course and the only Canadian representative thus far to do so. Twenty-seven graduated from this year's course. This is the fourth certificate Mr. Miller has received from the university for courses in driver licence administration. The training was arranged by the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators.

Born in Wapella, Sask., Mr. Miller received his education there. During the Second World War he served in the Canadian Army overseas from 1939 to 1945. He joined the Highway Traffic Board in 1950 as a traffic officer and was promoted to chief driver examiner in 1954. He became chief traffic officer in June, 1957. "With the experience and training that Mr. Miller brings back with him, Saskatchewan motorists are assured of instruction in the best up-to-date methods in traffic and safety available," Mr. Christie said.

CPA seeks approval of East-West air service

Canadian Pacific Airlines will apply for rights to provide a competitive air service on a new main-line route pattern linking cities between Vancouver and Montreal. This announcement was made by W. A. Mather, chairman of Canadian Pacific Airlines.

The application, to be submitted to the Air Transport Board this month, will request traffic rights at the following cities: Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Regina, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. The proposed route pattern would directly duplicate only 10 percent of the present T.C.A. inter-city services. Thus, a number of the cities concerned would have more direct, as well as more frequent, air services. It was explained.

Details of the proposed schedules will be announced when the application is submitted. C.P.A. is prepared to start the new service as soon as A.T.B. approval is received. A fleet of 15 Super DC-6B airliners will be available for domestic service.

Commenting on this announcement, Mr. Mather said, "We are convinced that the time has come to satisfy the public demand for competitive air service in Canada. It is apparent that the measure of competition involved in the C.P.A. application would benefit the travelling public by improving the quality, efficiency, and the frequency of available air service in this country. Competitive air service in Canada would result in no duplication of facilities in terms of public investment in air terminals and communications—rather, public revenues from these facilities would increase because of the greater frequency of domestic flights. After 20 years of monopoly, the transcontinental airline, now, if ever, should be strong enough to stand up to competition in a prospering economy. We in Canadian Pacific Airlines believe we can provide an efficient and profitable east-west air service under competitive conditions and thus our application is in line with the proven principles of the free enterprise system."

Three prices for district peddler

The office of Indian Head Real Estate Merchants' Association has suggested that warning should be considered by consumers who are being called on by door-to-door salesmen selling everything from pots and pans, electrical appliances, vacuum cleaners, aluminum ware, furniture to cosmetics. All these articles could be bought from legitimate retailers in Indian Head at lower prices than charged by the peddlers.

It has been brought to the attention of the Association that aluminum ware has been sold by door-to-door salesmen at a price of $175 a set, whereas a better set and guaranteed could have been purchased in a local hardware store for $80. Products from peddlers if not satisfactory as to quality and wearability cannot be adjusted or replaced, whereas if purchased from a local dealer, satisfaction is readily obtainable. A report is to hand of a peddler selling three vacuum cleaners in one district, the identical cleaner being sold to one party at $125, to another at $225 and $260 to a third.

Local dealers suggest that before household supplies are bought from unknown door-to-door salesmen that a local dealer be contacted for a price. It will be found that the local dealer will be lower in price and will gladly give service to all sales.—The Touchwood Times, Punnichy, Sask., Nov. 6/57.

Mankota's red invasion

The yearly invasion of Mankota has arrived wherever you look, wherever you walk, you see red. This has been so since the government has relaxed its protective laws against a poor unsuspecting animal—the antelope.

The hunters are here and if their aim is as true as it has been in past years, several hundred animals will be missed from our herds.

Approximately 300 antelopes go through the local checking station yearly and several crates pass through the hands of the local magistrate as well. So observe your game laws to the letter.

Accommodation however has become a problem, but the citizens of Mankota go out of their way to provide sleeping quarters for these annual visitors. We hope they'll all be successful in obtaining their animal.—The Kinross-Mankota Star, Moose Jaw, Sask.

FROST!

Color contrast to vie with that of earlier days of the year was Sunday's remarkable gift. Hoar frost paid its first visit of the season. In the morning it was to be seen in towns—and no doubt throughout the district—but it disappeared early in the day.

As I headed north on No. 8 highway not long after noon, I was most pleasantly surprised to learn that the frost was richly spread on the higher country east and north of town. It lay in more bounty on the trees of the dark hills in the near distance. As far as I could see it shrouded areas in other directions from town.

The sky was somewhat sulen with dark, though not heavy, clouds for the first mile or two. Then it began to smile, and the trees were swept with brilliance as the sun appeared. As mentioned to me later, the absence of snow made the effect of the frost more than usually pronounced. I also learned that the trip to Togo was an adventure in natural beauty.

Frost clung to overhead wires and to the TV aerial at the mission. A remarkable picture was formed by a spruce tree and the church—the frosted tip of the tree and the silvery steeples of the church reaching upwards together.

At this time of year one becomes aware of things scarcely noticed, or missed altogether in the summer. A feature of the countryside these years is granaries. As I observed them along the way I thought how their number has grown with the grain surplus. Snow fences, erected in proper readiness here and there along the highway were a reminder of days to come.

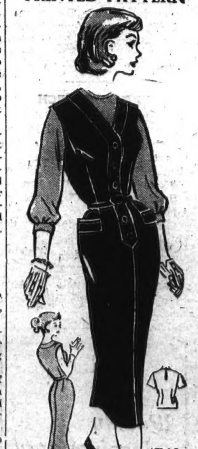

On Saturday—on a short trip east—I noticed the house on top of the big hill at the five mile corner for the first time. Driving a mile or so along the lake road before turning back I met several trucks loaded with cut logs. And around town, I couldn't help noticing the now quite rapidly growing forest of TV aerials. The Times, Kamnask, Sask., November 7, 1957.

Checking on teen-age driving

Apparently there have been a number of protests on the car driving practices of several teenagers round town, and complaints against this careless or irrational driving have even been made to the school board. Careless driving is at all times a menace, but is particularly so in the vicinity of schools.

The school principals have the full support of the school board in any disciplinary measures they may take, and have been alerted to keep check on teen-age driving coming to their attention. The RCMP will also give co-operation. There may be only a few violators of safe-driving principles, but authorities feel that the time to call a halt is before any real tragedy occurs.—The Times, High River, Alta., November 7, 1957.

on a SHOESTING

This is the seventh letter in this series. Those interested in purchasing reprints of the preceding six letters, are asked to write to Canadian Weekly Features, 1410 Fourth St. Availability will depend on the number of requests received. The price suggested is one dollar for the series of six letters and ten cents for each additional copy of the same series of six letters.

Have had some interesting inquiries this past two weeks. Almost a flood asking for help. Fortunately we have many answers in mimeographed form and these went out promptly, with a letter thanking them for the inquiry and stating we would like to be of further help when and if necessary.

Among those sent were several on Stage makeup. We have as you know a fine brochure written by Mrs. Gordon Tombs, Regina. Another chap is to stage manager a Christmas concert and needs some help with lights, where to borrow them, how to color them, etc. I told him that the Fitness and Recreation Division have available up to nine small portable lights. There is a small charge for each of 50¢ a light per performance to cover replacement, damage, etc. The express is paid going out and the group must pay the expense to get back to the office. He replied immediately booking four of them for December 22 for a Cantata to be presented instead of the evening church service. He enclosed two dollars to cover the rental. I recommended that he contact Mallabar Costumes, 370 Regent Street, Winnipeg, for the gelines in almost any color he required. They are 25¢ a sheet and when required we keep in a cool place while not in use. Makeup supplies may be secured from the same place or from Barnes Costumes, 300 Dwyer Avenue, Regina. The price is very nominal per stick.

In North Battleford, where a fine new gymnasium-auditorium has been built, we have received requests from a chap asking for advice on the use of the fine installed lighting equipment for the stage, as well as for books on stage design. Several others from young Saskatchewan Farmers groups have requested plays for reading and selection purposes. They plan to do some production after Christmas when the roads close in. They made no bones about it. They wish to buy a projection machine for their club room, and some hockey equipment for their team.

I am beginning to suspect the whole country is putting on plays for some reason. I love meeting new people and groups interested in play production. I've been invited to speak at the RCAF Station, Moose Jaw. They are planning a Variety Night which will include a one act play. Maybe if they made no bones about it, next season, I'll be able to go.

By the way, the date is now set to visit your group in December for a few days. Should be a good time with your production coming off in late January. We'll catch them shortly after they get on the floor, and before they are too set in the play pattern. No, there's no charge for this service, but, hope, if its cold weather, you can get a warm room in the local hotel. Do you suppose I might visit the High School during the day, since they have a play in rehearsal? The principal wrote me, stating it was for a non-compete festival in February. Think this is a splendid idea. The two neighboring towns are each doing a play and they are going to play one night in each town, with an adjudicator present the last night in the biggest hall. The companies will thus get accustomed to constructive evaluation of their efforts from an outsider, and in time if they take it kindly, their standard of work will improve. Then when they feel they have enough experience, they can try competitive and see what other teams playing in other parts of the Province compare with their own.

Mr. Barnes, of Barnes Costumes, just called and said you had ordered your make-up kit and he wanted further details. We also discussed your order for costumes. Why can't you have your neighbors search through their attics and basements for clothes of the 1820's and save your money for ward buying materials and making your own wardrobe for your next show.

Have your helpers had any problems in their various projects? Has anything come up you haven't been able to answer satisfactorily? I realize you have some experienced people assisting you, so you should be alright.

ACTING is the next question. What is acting? It is acting. It is long been in dispute. Acting is an Art and Art is communicating of an experience which is intended to be shared with the audience, might be a definition for your consideration.

Acting is a double problem—(a) the question of what effect acting should create (b) and how to create the effect? How to act? There are at least two schools of thought.

One group says—Live the part, abandon yourself to emotional absorption which usually results in a performance. The other says—The actress dies at the end of the play. The play ran for over 1,000 nights. Imagine, if you can, live the part and getting to that emotional pitch every night for 1,000 nights.

The other group says—create the emotion, observe and taking what is needed to create the part as the author intended. This is an intellectual process. Experience the emotion or recall a somewhat similar emotion and having felt it once, built it and then turn it off and on like a tap when required. Players building thus use body movement and voice together and become adept at characterization. Audrey Hepburn says: "Appearing on a stage is easy. It's the working, dreaming, worrying for weeks beforehand that is so hard."

I fond parent asked me the other day "Is it possible to teach acting?" My reply didn't satisfy her. I know. "It's impossible to teach unless there is a will to learn and the pupil is prepared to accept the discipline of the Theatre."

However, an actor can be helped to approach his role by informal discussion of his character with the Director and in the group, by constant observation of people, creating extraneous ideas and then by steadily thinking, experimenting and concentrating, a part can be built to be convincing. I wonder how many people go to the theatre to be deceived. A conscientious actor who has really worked under a good director can do this all the time.

Maybe right here I should mention the 5 W's that I recommend. "Who - What - Where - When - Why". If these are clearly understood and applied to the various roles by any group of actors they should seldom say to the Director "How shall I do it?" or "How do you want me to do or say it." I know directors who ask during the discussion period to write a biography of their characters life from the time they were born until the minute the play opens. Much of what happens in the play is the result of what happened in their earlier years before the play takes place, and their actions and thoughts in the play result from these situations.

A good actor asks "Who am I?" and he refers to his notes made at the first reading rehearsal. The author usually tells much about him in the lines and stage directions in italics in the script. He should use his creative imagination to dream up the play.

"What" is another question. What makes me do the things I do? What can I think? What am I saying? What are the others thinking and saying to me or about me? What emotions have I when people say things to me? What reactions result? In other words, "What is my task, to put over to the audience the thoughts the author intended I should leave with them?

"Where" is usually found in italics in the script. "When" is also given by the author and relates to the season of the year, and the time of the day. These facts have definite bearing on costumes and lighting.

"Why" is an important question to answer for the building of a convincing characterization. Why am I here? Why did I come? Why do I stay? Why do people treat me as they do? Why do I treat them as I do? Why do my emotions act as they do? etc.

Good actors must develop all these fine points and put them into action. Then we will no longer have people standing like telephone poles, speaking lines without meaning or emotion. In addition, the digging, digging, and more digging to find out more answers never ceases until the final curtain the last night of the show.

At an early reading while the discussions are still on, the actor should write in pencil on the margin of his script, or underline—(a) directions pertaining to his part (b) plot lines—lines said that further the plot of the play and must be remembered by the audience. (c) scenes—episodes marked by important entrances and exits or by change of emotions. There may be as many as 15 scenes or as few as six scenes in a one-act play and 40 or 50 in many three-act plays. (d) minor climaxes in each scene. Find out whose responsibility it is to carry that climax line or action, and if you wish, call it their scene. (e) major climax—highest point of tension in the play, the place where everyone knows what the result will be, even if they don't know all the final details.

These minor and major climaxes must come off if the audience is to go home satisfied. And remember that an Action Climax is stronger and more telling than a word climax, but if both word and action can be combined, it is the strongest yet. Sometimes the climax may take place outside the room for instance in one play, the climax is the sound of the army marching up the street outside.

DOING every line is as important as SAYING every line and should be the point of every rehearsal. Thus memorization of movement and lines must be done together in the scene rehearsal, and results is unified acting.

Well, that will give you something more to go on. Bye until next week. Sincerely,

Mary Ellen Burgess

Abundant water supply assured for Herbert

Representatives of the International Water Supply Company of Saskatchewan have been investigating the water-supply situation in this rapidly expanding trading centre, and report that a pump-test disclosed the fact that right at the site of the present well located at the Town Hall, there is enough water literally to flood the town. Analysis reveals that the water is good for human consumption and domestic use.

All that is necessary in order to extend water and sewage facilities to the entire town would be a new well of larger capacity drilled where the present well is located.

Herbert citizens are jubilant. Natural gas was officially welcomed to Herbert on October 30th; now an abundant water supply assures continuance of expansion and more citizens able to enjoy the amenities of life.

An abundant water supply is something essential for either industrial or residential growth; so, with natural gas, and lots of water, it is felt that the future looks bright for this town. —The Herald, Herbert, Sask., Nov. 14, 1937.

In the opening up of the west which followed, B of M branches were hand in hand with the pioneers. The present Bank of Montreal in Canada, including 44 in Saskatchewan, 76 in Alberta and 33 in Manitoba, and with assets in excess of $2,700,000,000 and a staff of some 12,000 men and women.

When the B of M began operations, the population of Canada was about 500,000 and the Prairies had few human inhabitants except for Indians drifting after buffalo.

The B of M introduced Canada's first native currency immediately and within two weeks had opened its first branch. These two innovations, half a century before Confederation, were the beginnings of the Canadian financial structure and the Canadian system.

4-H AND RURAL LEADERSHIP

The 4-H Club movement in Canada, a nation-wide program for rural young people, continues to grow in numbers and achievement. In 1957, a total of 73,485 members, an increase of 721 over 1956, were enrolled in 5,062 4-H Clubs in Canada. Today, there are 1,949 4-H Clubs in the Prairie Provinces alone, with a total membership of 28,192. These young farm people are actively taking part in a well-planned program designed to develop better farming methods, future rural leaders, and good Canadian citizens.

National 4-H Club Week

The highest award in 4-H Club work is the all-expense trip to National Club Week which, each year, is held in Toronto at the time of the Royal Winter Fair. On this occasion, proficiency winners in 4-H from the ten provinces are brought together to discuss subjects affecting not only Canadian agriculture and Canadian citizenship, but the important role of Canada in world affairs. The theme chosen for this year's National Club Week, "4-H and Rural Leadership", is timely and significant.

Rural Leadership

Every aspect of Canadian living, and more particularly rural living demands leaders—well-trained young men and women with vision, initiative, ability and courage. Perhaps the greatest contribution of the 4-H Club movement in Canada is the part it has played in raising the standards by which farm boys and girls judge themselves—and by which they have been able to raise the standards of the community in which they live. Not all 4-H members will, of course, become outstanding leaders, but the principles, talents and skills they develop through their 4-H Club associations and activities is the very stuff of which leaders are made.

The Canadian Council on 4-H Clubs, the national organization through which the 4-H Club program in Canada is co-ordinated, deserves the highest praise for the outstanding contribution it is making toward the training of young people for future leadership and service in our rural communities. The need for rural leadership is greater today than ever before.

Highway Association Asks For Completion of Highway 36

A bridge over the Red Deer River in 1958 is the target set by the North-South Highway 36 Association. The organization held a board of directors meeting in Hanna last week.

The directors, representing an area from Lac La Biche to Wainwright, passed two resolutions which will bring the objective before Highway Minister Gordon Taylor in time to be included in next year's provincial budget.

The resolutions stated, "whereas as the completion of the North-South Highway 36 is dependent on bridges being constructed over all rivers and streams which cross the highway,

"Whereas the last river without a bridge is the Red Deer River, and whereas the distance between bridges in the general area of the proposed highway is now 125 miles,

"Therefore be it resolved, that construction of a bridge over the Red Deer River, in line with the north-south Highway 36, be started in 1958."

The second resolution is, "Whereas this committee feels that immediate action is necessary for the construction of this bridge over the Red Deer River in 1958,

"Therefore be it resolved that a committee of four be appointed to present the bridge resolution to the minister at the earliest possible date, and to see what action can be taken for paving from Viking to Two Hills."

A committee was appointed by the meeting to meet with the Highways Minister in time to include the bridge in the province's 1958 budget. Included in the committee are, Bruce Stringham, independent M.L.A. for Bow Valley; president of the Highway 36 Association, L. E. Helmer, Del Pound, Brooks; and Roy Manning, Killam. The delegation is expected to make the trip to Edmonton in December.

During the meeting, president Helmer gave a report on the highway's progress in the past year. In the report issued by Highways Minister Taylor, were expenditures totalling to about one and a quarter million dollars. Included in these expenditures were the highway construction from Taber to the Old Man River, $284,000; Old Man River to Vauxhall, $172,000; bridge constructions between Taber and Vauxhall, $52,000; reinforced bridge over the Bow River at Scandia, $340,000; and a reinforced concrete girder bridge over the Old Man River at Taber, $362,000. The work on the two highway contracts, the report added, were completed while work on the bridges is now under progress.

A letter was also received from Senator J. W. Stambaugh. The senator told the Association that it is his hope the Association will be able to convince the Government of the importance and necessity of completing Highway 36.

Ros Fitzmaurice represented the Viking Chamber of Commerce at the meeting.

R. D. Taylor, president of the Chamber of Commerce, attended a meeting on Monday all-day closing held at Wainwright last Wednesday. It followed the same lines as a similar meeting held here two weeks ago. The question was thoroughly discussed by representatives from Edmonton to Tofield and they came to the conclusion that Monday All Day Closing will come into effect sooner or later along this line.

News Report
from Edmonton

By Ken Mason

EDMONTON—Watch for bitter debate during the next session of the Legislature when the Opposition sinks its teeth into final figures on the first year of the oil and gas royalty dividend program.

Figures released last week indicate the government may have lost as much as $48,300 to persons suspected of making false claims for the $20 payments. The amount could even run higher.

The latest tally shows 532 persons are or have been under investigation by the attorney-general's department, with a total of 2,418 separate dividends involved.

Half a dozen applicants on the list are believed to have grabbed 20 or more dividends and one using the same name on every certificate, is reported to have obtained more than 60.

So far the government has paid out some 504,000 dividends, using up more than $10,000,000 of the $11,000,000 fund and another rush of claims is expected as Christmas approaches.

Of course everyone expected there would be abuses of the dividend scheme, but the apparent extent of them is more than anyone anticipated. There is a strong possibility that many of the offenders will never be tracked down, and there is also a chance that some sharpies have taken more than their share without rousing suspicion.

All of this adds up to ammunition for another major attack against the dividend plan next year by the Liberals, Conservatives and CCF-ers in the House. A repeat of last year's non-confidence motions can be expected.

Some of the criticism will be aimed at the system of distribution used this year. Under the system, a citizen can go to any bank and collect his cash simply by signing a statement saying he meets the qualifications.

It is known that the provincial audit branch, which has the mammoth task of checking all complicated certificates and spotting suspicious ones, is unhappy with the system. So is the attorney-general's department, which must investigate all possible cases of fraud.

Reliable sources say the government was advised beforehand against the system of on-the-spot payments. It was advised to use a system of application forms which would be checked before the money went out instead of after.

The government, however, wanted to adopt a method which would allow the public to collect its $20 bonus cheques as quickly as possible and with a minimum of red tape.

Premier Manning says changes will be made next year to cut down the possibility of fraud. He says the government is considering issuing identification cards which applicants would present to the banks when calling for their dividends. The banks would punch or endorse the card, showing that the bearer had received his payment.

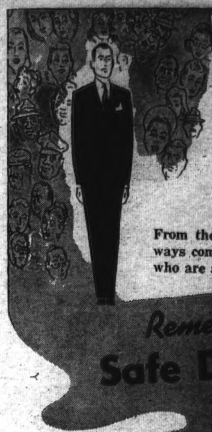

The premier says the cards would be issued to eligible citizens on a master list drawn up from applicants who drew their dividends this year.

It would have been impractical to establish any registration of half a million or so people this year when the plan was first introduced, he said, but now a master list is available.

The premier also pointed out that the provincial treasury doesn't lose anything as a result of false claims for dividends.

The government is restricted to setting aside only one-third of oil and gas royalties for the dividend pool each year, he said, and that must pay for the whole program.

If there is a deficit, he said, it must be made up from the dividend pool the following year. Therefore, anyone who chisels on the plan is just cheating the public because it means less money next year. On the other hand, if there is money left over at the end of the year it goes into the pot and there is that much more to distribute next year.

We who are about to die . . .

AS AN INTRODUCTION to the carnage of the spectator sports of ancient Rome, the gladiators would face the crowded tiers of the Colosseum and in chorus repeat the classic cry, "We who are about to die, salute you."

From the 24 hour-a-day slaughter on Canada's highways comes the chorus of anonymous thousands, "We who are about to die, implore you . . ."

PLANNING ALBERTA COMMUNITIES

Alberta's development has not been confined to the large cities. Towns and rural areas also reflect the growth and the problems of systematic planned expansion that go with it. The Government accordingly established the Provincial Planning Advisory Board in 1951 to determine planning policies. These policies are administered by the Town and Rural Planning Branch of the Department of Municipal Affairs. The technical advice and assistance at the branch is available upon request to any Municipality under 5,000 population which is not a member of a District Planning Commission. An aerial survey is made of the community from which contour maps are prepared. Plans are then made for subdividing and zoning. Detailed layouts for housing and commercial areas are drawn up. In addition a report based on economic and population surveys is prepared for a planning period of ten years. Proposals for the orderly development of the municipality are included in this report. One half of the cost of the aerial survey is the only expense borne by the municipality representing a small percentage of the total cost for this complete service.

ASSESSMENT BRANCH

Uniformity in assessments for municipal taxation purposes is a problem which has long existed. The Assessment Branch of the Department of Municipal Affairs was formed in 1925 to achieve this end. Since its inception many changes have been incorporated to keep pace with the growth of Alberta. It has also been necessary to alter assessment methods in view of the new types of construction and building techniques presently being used. Practically all of the towns and villages in the province have requested departmental assessments for taxation and other purposes. Rural assessments are not undertaken by Branch assessors although under certain conditions the government pays 50% of costs. Urban areas are required to pay one-half the cost of assessment, with the government paying the remainder, notwithstanding who carries out the work, whether a municipal or government assessor. Assessment Branch sub-offices have been established at Red Deer, Grande Prairie, Calgary and Lethbridge to ensure close liaison with the local municipal officials, as well as to give advice and assistance to appointed municipal assessors.

INSPECTION BRANCH

The Department of Municipal Affairs Act requires the books and records of every municipality to be inspected at least once a year. This is the responsibility of the Inspection Branch and all assessment and tax rolls, minute books, by-law registers, cash books, bank books and any other records the Inspector may require of the Municipality are examined. Assistance and advice on procedure for effective administration of the municipality is an important service of the Inspection Branch. In cases of where new towns, villages, municipal districts or counties are incorporated a member of the inspection branch may act as administrator of this new unit until the council has been elected. Each year an annual report is prepared by the Inspection Branch in which is incorporated the financial statements of every municipality in Alberta.

These important service branches are also part of the Department of Municipal Affairs.

IT'S UP TO US

There come times when districts take a succession of losses of lives that makes them wonder if they will ever recover. Citizens who played prominent parts in developing communities die, and with them die some hopes and plans or, as it might be called, some "unfulfilled business."

That is because of the type of person who died. The thoughtful, busy citizen was always being thoughtful and busy. Death interrupted their work, regardless of how old they were according to the standards of usefulness we set. Because their usefulness was a continuing thing, they leave gaps in the communities as well as the sadness at their passing.

How much can a community afford to lose? That depends on how much we who are left have learned from those who have gone. If we respect them as we do, we respect them because of qualities which are desirable, and which if we have known them well, we should have absorbed some of those qualities. We cannot, perhaps, inherit the ability to sing well, or paint good pictures, or to draw a strong bow, but we can inherit the thoughtfulness, the gentleness, the unselfishness, the tolerance and some of the ambitions, community-wise especially, of the people we admire.

If we have been made better because of having known those who die, we will be sad at their passing, but our families and our communities will be fortified against loss through death, which was the ultimate goal for which those good citizens strive—even until death.—The Signal, Wawota, S.E.

Lucky you

There is something pathetic about the little two-wheeled cart, that sits idle now by the side of our post office. After serving the Lockwood public back and forth twice a day, carrying bags of mail for 40 years, now to be laid aside and no use in these years of advancement! Reminds me of so many of the older citizens, here and there, who gave so generously of their time and efforts, down through the year, for the good of others. . . . then to be pushed aside and left alone by the side of the road. If the little two-wheeled cart had a mind, I wonder what it would think of the new diesel whizzing by, the outer space travel and the Sputnik. Next time I wander by the faithful old cart, I'll whisper, "Lucky you, enjoy your peace and contentment from this kind of life, and escape the terrible rumble!"—L.E.G.—The Manitow, Watrous, Sask., November 7, 1957.

While not denying the allegations entirely, logical reasons for most of the existing conditions were given by business men, admitting, however, that here certainly is room for improvement.—The Herald-Tribune, Grande Prairie, Alta., Nov. 5, 1957.

SHOP LOCALLY

Failure to apply selves
may result in expulsion

A screening policy for high school students similar to that in effect by County of Newell Schools has been adopted by Brooks School District. The policy provides that the board may require a student who is doing unsatisfactory work to leave high school.

The move was felt advisable because each year there are a few students who are not interested in applying themselves in spite of efforts made by the teaching body to stimulate, encourage and persuade these students to do better work. It is felt that such students tend to retard progress in the class and have an undesirable effect on other students.

The school board emphasized that the policy is intended for those students who are working far below their level of ability; it is not intended to apply to those who are making earnest and conscientious effort.

October or November report cards will be examined carefully by the principal and his staff. If it is their opinion that the student is not applying himself sufficiently, he will be placed on probation until Christmas when his case will be reviewed. His parents will be interviewed in an effort to bring improvement in the student's work. His name and a brief report will be submitted to the superintendent of schools.

Report cards early in January will be examined again; each case will be individually studied and decision on expulsion or not will be carefully weighed. Students who persistently refuse or fail to carry out assignments may be placed on probation at any time with an appropriate deadline date named.

The school board has publicly stated that it is considering the best interests of the school as well as those of the individual pupil. The board "has no intention of applying regulations blindly or of excluding pupils on anything but the most reasonable basis."—The Bulletin, Brooks, Alta., Nov. 7/57.
